ENERGY LIGHTING SERVICES NAMED FINALIST IN THE NASHVILLE BUSINESS JOURNAL'S "2020 BEST IN BUSINESS" AWARDS

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: Nashville, Tennessee – Energy Lighting Services [ELS] was recently recognized as a top ten finalist at the Nashville Business Journal's "Best in Business" awards. ELS was honored in the category of private companies with 1-25 employees. Small and large nonprofits and private companies with more than 25 employees were also honored with awards. The ceremony took place at the Westin Nashville on Thursday, March 5th 2020.

"Being recognized by the Nashville Business Journal alongside these successful and innovative companies is very exciting for us," said ELS CEO, Jason Duncan. "We work hard every day to deliver the best service possible to our client's whether it be an LED lighting project or electrical service job. We are in the process of expanding our team and bringing some exciting new possibilities to our customers, so starting off the year with this award means a lot."

ELS is a small business based out of Hendersonville, Tennessee, that specializes in LED lighting design and retrofitting, which helps commercial building owners save on their electric bills. ELS also provide electrical services to the greater Nashville area. CEO Jason Duncan started the business nearly ten years ago after losing his teaching job as a result of the 2008 recession.

After being nominated for the award, eligible companies were sent an in-depth form to complete in order to be considered. Finalists were selected based on recommendations of a third-party panel of judges. To be eligible, companies needed to have significant operations in at least one of the following 10 Middle Tennessee counties: Cheatham, Davidson, Dickson, Maury, Montgomery, Robertson, Rutherford, Sumner, Williamson and Wilson.
